Left: On a day which started off overcast, cold and perilously windy for the less adventurous 1/2A/ Speed 400 flyers, Henry Smith, left, being timed by Brian Sargent, keeps a close eye on 'Hedy,' his Speed 400 entry early in the event. Note the exotic eye wear...

Henry's choice of timers turned out to be questionable as Brian managed to outscore him in Speed 400 when all was done.

(see results and pics on page 5)

.. From The February Meeting ...

Missing a few 'regulars', the meeting was nonetheless well attended and some issues around the pending contest at Dwarfs and planning details for our SAM 21 annual at the Schmidt Ranch were discussed and resolved.

The most momentous decision was to go ahead with the Speed 400 -1/2 A contest to be held at Dwarfs, rain or shine despite less than an ideal weather forecast. As it turned out the forecast was only partially correct and the event went off with some interesting results. (see Contest Coordinator Dave Lewis' report on page 7)

It is interesting to reflect for a minute that this year's edition of a SAM 21 annual contest will mark, according to the best available record, the 38th annual celebration of SAM 21 Old Timer competition. I'll do the math for you the first one was held in 1976 - where were you then?

Unfortunately your editor's request for members building Simplex's to bring the results of their labors to date to the meeting fell on mostly deaf ears. The idea was to attempt to reassure SAM 30 that their competition was on the way. Sr. Joe brought his completed wing and I brought the framework for my fuselage - that was it. I guess they'll just have to take our word for it. Perhaps I will make the request again for the June meeting.

Notes From The Right Seat

The economy is improving, I have proof of it. which I submit here:

Out of the blue I received an e-mail from Marv Stern. Marv is the guy who markets the Aero Tech Electronic ignition system, one of the best available on the market today. I met Marv at the SAM Champs in Muncie - I think in 2010 and found him to be straight forward and knowledgeable.

My mantra has long been: If I can make it work, anyone can. I have proved this many times. I have several copies of earlier iterations of the unit, and find them easy to install, wire and use.

Mary wanted to know if he could advertise his latest. Mark III version of his ignition system in the Clipper, and I was happy to advise that he could - see his Ad on the back cover of this issue. Here is what he has to say about the unit:

The Mark III Ignition System combines an ESW-1 Electronic Switch with a powerful Mark II Coil-Saver Solid State Electronic Ignition unit, thus eliminating the need for a cumbersome servo/mechanical switch arrangement. A unique feature cuts off the ignition if the receiver loses signal, or if the engine stops with the points closed, preventing damage to the coil or ignition unit.

The part about the "Coil Saver" seemed to be an important addition to the Ignition unit, especially if one is using a 1s Lipo to power the ignition system. Don't want to run them babies down...

Also convenient is the ability to neatly hook up to an external battery for starting and testing purposes without having to use the on board battery. I highly recommend the Aero Tech svstem...

Below and left are some pictures of the unit...

The day (Sunday, April 27, 2014) started off cool (51 degrees) and windy (about 12 mph) and very overcast.

However, as time passed, the overcast started breaking up, the wind slacked and the temp. went up, so it turned into a rather nice morning. Strangely enough, some of the best times posted were when it was windy and cool; when it was less windy and also warmer, the posted times went DOWN. In any case, it certainly showed that rather small models with skilled pilots can handle wind and still put in some pretty good scores.

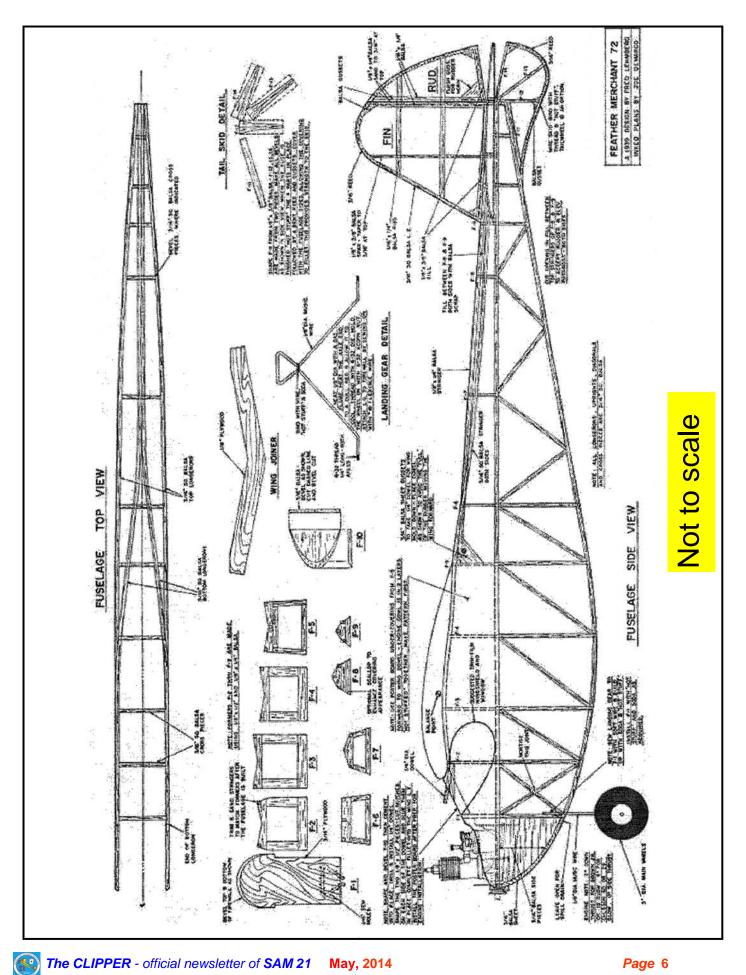

Brian Sargent dragged out the Weber and cooked a delicious BBQ lunch for everyone who hung around, which was very much appreciated by all. Thanks, Brian.

You're thinking that the SIMPLEX is a little known model, read on...

... And now, a few words about the history of the SIMPLEX, and some other things, from Mike Myers as he works through the restoration of a really old SIMPLEX.

"I did this wing in a light grey silk. It's now brittle and shattered. Will strip it and recover it with Monokote or Ultra Coat or whatever.

A word about the wing structure. The Australian kit for the Simplex says that the wing is stressed for engines smaller than .30—if you want anything larger you need to strengthen the spar. Stu Richmond's notes on his Simplex plan say "no balsa in the spar"—ol Stu was looking for a spruce spar . And Stu was using a K&B Sportster .20 which is okay, but not the world's biggest powerhouse. He was also writing before the composite era. I'd bet Dave Harding would make some kind of carbon fiber sandwich in there.

A few years back at Taft, I did manage to fold a Red Ripper wing that Bob Hartwig had built and flown back in Indiana. It was the full size Red Ripper at 72 inches. Bob was selling some of his models at Muncie and I bought the Red Ripper. He'd flown it for several years with an OS .32 and no problems. I put a brushless inrunner on it with a planetary gearbox. My battery pack was an eight cell 1000 mah NiCad job. I took off on its maiden flight at Lost Hills—made my first gentle turn at 200 feet or so—and the wing clapped hands. Fuselage came straight down on a haul road, which might as well have been cement. Goodbye to the gearbox and motor. Well maybe the motor survived but the gear box is kaput.

The E Flite 480 doesn't weigh all that much and the 3S1P 2200 mah LiPo is probably half the weight or less than the NiCad pack in the Ripper.

I would still suggest that guys building the 60" Simplex beef up that balsa spar with some kind of reinforcement—whether it be going to all spruce, or to spruce caps top and bottom on a balsa spar etc. My Simplex wing has an all balsa spar right now and I'll have to figure out some kind of reinforcement for it."

Mike continues:

"Here's the fuselage. Covered in nice red silk which became very brittle over time. So off it comes. I also need to redo the engine room area.

I'll put HS 81 servos in the very tail with short CF pushrods to the tail surfaces. Spektrum 2.4 receiver of course. I'll build a vertical battery storage area right behind the firewall. That may or may not get me the CG correct, but I'll sort that out with pieces of lead at the appropriate places. I don't want the battery flopping around in flight.

The fuselage was originally set up for a spark ignition engine and so there are holes for an Austin Timer etc. I'll clean up the planking on the sides and get rid of the holes. Speed control will go forward of firewall. I'll have to build a little plywood motor mount to get prop plane on the E Flite 480 at an appropriate distance in front of the firewall. I like "arming plugs" on larger electric models and will install one of those on the left front side of the fuselage."

Stay tuned, there's more next month...
